VOLUME II, NO. 1.

Six months ago this morning, May 19, the first number of THE REPUBLICAN appeared.

It was a most ambitious undertaking to try to establish such a paper in a Territory so sparsely settled as Arizona, but its success has more than equalled the fondest hopes of its founders. Probably no business was ever started under more discouraging circumstances than was THE REPUBLICAN. Not one of the old papers of the Territory had a good word for it, at its birth. Laboring under misapprehension as to the status of its real founders, many opposed it unjustly. By others it was called the "organ," and a limit of thirty days was given for its existence. Later this was extended to sixty days, but still the paper continued to grow and prosper.

Endeavoring to give the full report of the Associated Press, it was crippled at the beginning by want of operators capable of receiving the full press report. Having to train mailing clerks and other employees, it at first was crippled in its mailing facilities. In fact everything seemed to combine to make its progress impossible.

But gradually all the difficulties were overcome. Arrangements were made with the Western Union and Arizona Telegraph Companies for a special wire leading directly into THE REPUBLICAN office. Mailing clerks learned their work and the paper was issued promptly and in time to connect with all the early morning mails. Papers and persons who opposed the "organ" began to see that they had labored under misapprehension, and that THE REPUBLICAN had come, as it claimed in its first number, "to build up, not to pull down," and from being opponents they became warm supporters.

Commencing with no assured circulation, its growth has been phenomenal, its average daily circulation for the last month, from October 19 to November 19, being 57½ quires. These figures are taken from the pressman's daily report, and are open for the inspection of any advertiser. They show that the circulation of THE REPUBLICAN is now greater than that of all the other morning papers of Arizona combined. It goes regularly into every hamlet in the Territory.

The growth of THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN has kept pace with the daily. The first number was issued May 29, and the weekly circulation now is twenty-seven quires.

Now, the same as it began, THE REPUBLICAN employs none but Union printers and pays first-class wages. Its salary roll alone, aside from rent, water, gas, and sundry expenses, amounts to $350 per week.

Advertising patronage has kept pace with the growth of subscription. Beginning with less than four columns of ads, its advertising patronage is now crowding upon the space reserved for reading matter, and, although our rates are more than double those of any other paper in the Territory, a further advance of 25 per cent will be made in the near future.

As it stated in the first number, so THE REPUBLICAN can say now, it will work for the upbuilding of the whole Territory. The friends of Arizona will be our friends; her enemies our enemies. Agriculture, railroads, irrigating canals, mines, mills, smelters and everything calculated to build up the Territory, and enhance the interests of the people will receive the earnest and undivided support of THE REPUBLICAN.

The patronage extended by the people of Arizona has greatly encouraged the editor and proprietors of THE REPUBLICAN, and in fact every employee in any wise connected with it, and each and all will earnestly labor to more fully deserve further support, than they have even done in the past.

The Tucson Citizen "hits the nail on the head," as it were, in the following: "It may not be a pleasant thought that Arizona politics are controlled by Wilford Woodford, of Salt Lake, and President Layton, of Graham, but it is a cold, bare, naked, shivering fact just the same."

THE REPUBLICAN—"I'm pretty healthy for a six-months-old, thank you."

HOW TO DEAL WITH INDIANS

Perhaps an Indian outbreak in the Northwest might be productive of good in one way. The country is becoming thickly settled in the vicinity of the Sioux, many of the residents coming from New England and the Eastern States. It might be possible that an Indian raid among these people would result in the overthrow of the sickly pro-Indian sentiment in the East, a sentiment that has been the almost direct cause of the murder of hundreds of whites in Arizona; a sentiment that sends to the President petitions with thousands of names, praying for a return to Arizona of the "poor, unhappy Apaches," now under surveillance in Alabama. The Indian Rights Association is composed for the most part of persons whose knowledge of the Indian character has been derived from Cooper's tales. They should be instructed, for in their obstinate, self-sufficient ignorance they are doing incalculable injury to every political division of the West. They should be taught that those whose relatives and friends have been murdered by the red fiends necessarily are more acquainted with the real facts bearing upon the question, though not so well informed in the high moral ethics bearing upon the claims of the Indian upon the white. The "philanthropist" should investigate and appreciate the reason for the bitter feeling that exists upon the frontier against those tribes, wards of the government upon reservations, fed only that they might periodically break loose from all restraint and pursue a murderous career that is only checked after months pursuit and the expenditure of millions of money.

These "friends of the down trodden red man" view with approval the hanging of any white man who has murdered his neighbor. Their penitentiaries are well filled with evil doers of every degree. But, when the untiring efforts of the army have finally run to earth these wolves of the west, the advice is quick to come from these same good eastern people to "put them back on the reservation; give them plenty of food and clothes; teach them the blessed scripture and reform them by gentle means." With blunt disregard for sentimentality, we know that if one of these same intercessors was attacked by a wolf in the woods, he would defend himself; ay, and seek by every means to destroy the vicious animal. The same reasoning is equally applicable to the Sioux or the Apache. They are human wolves and as utterly untamable as the most savage of that species. Nothing but force will restrain them, nothing but fear will induce them to refrain from murder and rapine. Every Indian who is captured after a murderous raid should be hanged. He is not a prisoner of war. He is simply a criminal, a vile murderer, and as such he should be amenable to the civil law. Had such a course been adopted with Sitting Bull's band, the present rumored outbreak would never have been heard of. If such a course had been adopted with the first band of Apache marauders who ever went upon the warpath, the Apaches today would be as peaceable as the Pimas. Enforce upon them the law, which, though severe, is just and productive of good to the greatest number.

SAYS the Prescott Journal-Miner: "Talk about the National Republican Central Committee or any other committee putting $20,000, or any other sum into the campaign of Arizona, seems to be too absurd to deny. Democratic papers continue to assert it with such persistency, however, that in the course of time they may come to believe it, but of course no one else will. If the National Republican Committee had any surplus funds to put into the campaign, it seems they could have applied it where it would have done more good than in Arizona. At least that is the way it looks since the result has been announced. There was not a single dollar put into the campaign in Arizona by Republicans except what was necessary to defray the legitimate expenses of the canvass, and it is safe to say that Mark Smith and his Democratic friends and managers spent more money than did the Republican candidate and his friends."

THE editorial reference to Ex-Delegate Du Bois, of Idaho, in our morning contemporary will no doubt be a great surprise to the friends of the coming Senator, not only at his home, but in Washington, where Mr. Du Bois is conceded to be one of the most exemplary of representatives, not only in his public but private life—in fact he is cited as an example of correct moral conduct. Connecting his name with lewd or ungentlemanly behavior is entirely unwarranted, and whether prompted by ignorance or malice, is equally to be condemned. It is possible that the editor's mind is confused, and he has been mistakenly crediting the attributes of the Delegate from Arizona to the gentleman from Idaho.

SAYS the Nogales Herald: "The newspaper fraternity of Arizona did not fare very well in the late election, three of their number being candidates and all defeated. In Cochise County the 'Cousin Jacks' knocked out George Meek, of the Epitaph, for the Assembly. Ed S. Gill, of THE ARIZONA REPUBLICAN, was knocked out for the same position by the Mormons, and C. M. Funston, of the Kingman Miner, failed to get the office of Probate Judge because he didn't rustle for it."

THE Nogales Herald tells some pretty solid facts in the following short paragraph: "The trouble with the Republican party in Arizona is that it has too many men who want to stand back on their dignity and wait to be called as first United States Senators, instead of going to work and assisting the party in its struggles against Mormonism and Bourbonism. This fear of displacing assumed Senatorial dignity is what defeated Cheyney."

"THE Mormons of Graham County," says the Tombstone Epitaph, "have commenced to defend each other against the charge of being driven to the polls. This is amusing."
